HOTEL REGULATION BILL IS RIDICULED.

MIRTH - PROVOKING
AMENDMENTS

—Mirth provoking Amendments.....
Bill Against Cigarette Smoking Killed—Automobile Speed Limit Stands.

Guthrie, Ok., May 5.—In recommending for passage the bill by Mr. Murray and Mr. Whitehurst of the house for the regulation and inspection of hotels, the senate loaded it down with many mirth-provoking amendments and subjected it to much ridicule.

The bill, among other things, provides for extended bed sheets, which may be folded over the covering, thus preventing the sleeper from inhaling germs which might be lurking in the bed covering. The first amendment was that the sheets should be as long as the top as they were at the bottom.

Short Blanket Sarcasm.

Senator Soldani of the Osage Nation gave the senate a treatise on how to keep warm under a short blanket, which brought from Senator Bill Johnson of Canadian county a protest against the passage of the bill.

"How is the farmer going to get any benefit from this legislation?" he thundered, "when there is no provision for the inspection of wagon yards?"

An additional section by Senator Russell was adopted, containing a poet's prayer supposed to be repeated by all guests sleeping in inspected hotels.

As the bill was completed, Senator Roddie said Texas had been the subject of ridicule for trying to pass a law compelling nine-foot bed sheets, and that Oklahoma was in a fair way to follow.

Anti-Cigarette Bill Lost.

This being House day in the senate, it took a whirl at the anti-cigarette bill by Representative Snelson, which makes it a misdemeanor, with a fine of $5 to $25, for smoking cigarettes, and unlawful to give away or sell tobacco of any kind to persons under 16 years of age. Instead of repealing the present Oklahoma law, the bill adds to it, but on final passage it was short two votes of a majority and was declared lost.

The bill by Representative Cope of Canadian county, regulating the running of automobiles and cutting down the speed limit one could attain on the public highways, was also killed.

Senator Stewart secured favorable consideration of his industrial school bill, which was withdrawn from the governor's office yesterday and changed, the personnel of the board of regents to be composed of the state superintendent of education, president of the board of agriculture and three others, two of whom shall be women to be appointed by the governor and confirmed by the senate.

It is agreed in the bill that this school shall not interfere with the agricultural and mechanical college, neither shall it have any of the money appropriated for the agricultural school by the general government.

Favorable recommendation was made upon Senator Taylor's bill for working county convicts on the public roads.

How slow the Tonkawa Preparatory School of Kay county is in field sports was brought out in the house debate upon Senator Davis' bill for a division of the income from land apportioned to the several Oklahoma educational institutions. Of the university money, the state university was down for five-eighths and Tonkawa for three-eighths.

On behalf of the former institution, Mr. Evans of Alfalfa county objected because a four hour course such as the preparatory school had, he insisted, could never place it in the university class. He told the house that the state university had graduates now members of university faculties in California, Montana, Maine and Wisconsin. One graduate was filling the post of United States consul at Saxony, Germany.

ing the post of United States consul at Saxony, Germany.

"Tonkawa has never been able to even reach the state university in field sports," said Mr. Evans. "The university bested the football team of the Edmond Normal, but the normal team in turn beat Tonkawa. They can never be in the same class, gentlemen."

Mr. Murdock thought if the students cut out baseball and football probably it would not cost the state so much to educate them. The bill was passed without change, and of the money the university gets $22,000 Tonkawa $13,000, Agricultural and Mechanical College $32,000, Colored Normal and University $3,500 and the three normal schools $11,590 each.

FREIGHT TRAIN DASHES INTO
CREEK SWOLLEN BY FLOODS

Two Distinct Tornadoes Visit Districts in Arkansas—Two Killed at Town of Marche.

St. Louis, Mo., May 5.—A thunderstorm of unusual severity, accompanied by a high wind, swept over this city early today, doing much damage to property and indirectly causing loss of life.

The bridge of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, near Nellville, Ill. was washed out and wrecked a freight train. Engineer Ward, Conductor Smith and a trainman whose name was not learned, were caught under the engine and drowned.

The train piled up in a mass in a creek which was swollen into a torrent.

The lowlands known as "American Bottoms" east of East St. Louis, comprising an area of thirty-five miles, is under water. Many houses in the French village are unroofed and people are panic stricken.

In St. Louis several residences were struck by lightning.

Farmer and Niece Killed at Marche.

Little Rock, Ark., May 5.—Delayed reports of the general storm of yesterday over the state show a growing list of dead and injured. Two were killed outright at Marche, ten miles northwest of Little Rock, and two seriously injured, while reports from the same tornado along its track show many other injuries and reports from other tornadoes show further maiming of people.

Three distinct tornadoes are now accounted for, one beginning at Marche and traveling northwest through Palarm, Conway, Plumerville and Morrilton on the at Monticello, in the southeastern part of the state, and one at Cushman, in the northeastern section.

The Marche storm was by far the worst. Damage estimated at $300,000 was done by the wind, which swept away the lumber plant which was the life of the village, and uprooted forests of trees in its mile wide path, five miles long, at that place.

Although the storms occurred yesterday, so general was it that communication is still impossible by wire over a large part of the state, and additional storms tonight put out of commission wires that had been temporarily restored.

Terrific Storm Near Dumas, Ark.

Dumas, Ark., May 5.—A terrific storm, accompanied by much lightning, thunder and rain, struck this section last night about 8 o'clock. It was evident that great damage had been done toward the west, and this morning news was received here that the home of Will J. Martin, who resided with his wife near Mills post-office in Lincoln county, had been completely demolished, that Mrs. Martin had been killed and Will Martin himself escaped with his right leg fractured in two places.

PLAN TO GIVE $50,000 FOR BOLL WEEVIL REMEDY

Washington, May 5.—Senator McLaurin of Mississippi introduced a bill today authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay $50,000 to an person who shall within two years from the date of the passage of the act discover a practicable remedy which, if applied, will destroy the boll weevil.

The bill provides that any person may submit such remedy to the Secretary of Agriculture, who shall have it tested. It is provided that if more than one remedy or method shall be deemed satisfactory and practicable, the best one shall be adopted and the discoverer or inventor shall be paid the sum stipulated.

The Vanishing Fleets

BY ROY NORTON.

The miracle of her position was greater than the marvel of her return; for above and below that spot on the river were bridges impassable for a boat of half her size, beneath which tugs and other craft were wont to lower their jointed stacks. In all the world there was no known strength or mechanical contrivance that could transport over shallows and bridges 22,000 tons of steel, and then leave it in this prohibited place. Her very appearance bore mute testimony of singular strife. True, she was intact to a point flush with the great steel domes which held her menacing and frowning guns; but her fighting masts, her top rig, and the upper bands of her funnel were riven off as if by one devastating line shot taken full abeam or square astern. The wreckage of this hamper had been removed, so that no debris littered her deserted decks.

For many days of gloom it had been accepted as a fact that nothing but annihilation could account for the disappearance of the squadron which had doggedly sailed away into the mysterious west to vanquish a terrible and unknown enemy or meet a glorious death. Little hope had been sustained as the days of silence went by that any explanation of that defeat might be forthcoming, or that any vessel might return; and now before London's gathered populace was a grim relic which only added to conjecture. From no source could the secret of this mysterious visitation be learned; and so the crowd watched and waited.

A boat, whose flag distinguished her as being of the river patrol, obeyed a hail from the shore, pulled noisily up the stream against the outgoing tide, and circled round the leviathan as though suspecting danger from within. Her chief officer, after due caution, and receiving no response, cautiously directed her along side, and boarded the Dreadnought over the starboard quarter. The ever increasing crowd along the embankment drew in its breath in expectancy, waiting for a revelation. It heard him shout "Below, there!" and leaned forward, listening for whatever response might be given; but nothing was heard save the steady lap of the water and the farthest sounds of early river traffic.

The officer advanced along the deck to the companionway, and leaned curiously into it repeating his hail, and once more there was a wait and no reply. He backed away from the entrance, and hesitated. It was plain that he desired witnesses before invading the precincts of a stricken craft, and in a moment more he stepped to the rail, held a short conversation with those on the decks of his boat and then waited till he was joined by others of that force that guards the Thames. Three men clambered aboard and stood by him until they were joined by two others, who, obeying a low-spoken order, stationed themselves at the head of the companionway. The officer and his assistants advanced slowly, stepped into the darkness and disappeared into the depths of the battle ship, while the suspense along the embankment and on the patrol became more intense. It was several minutes before the investigators reappeared, and then they had gone only a short way into the vessel. They walked to the rail, and the crowd remained waiting. With British taciturnity they declined to answer any of the questions which were shouted to them from the shore.

The little boat swung off, turned her nose out into the stream and steamed hurriedly away at full speed, bent on summoning others of her service; and in less than half an hour returned accompanied by a small flotilla, which spread out and stationed its members close up against the sides of the stranded craft. Another officer of higher authority joined those waiting on the decks of the Dreadnought, and led the way below, ready to learn the worst. He went as into a plague ship manned by the dead expecting to meet nothing but ghoulish relics of tragedy, and prepared for shocking sights.

From place to place he advanced almost on tiptoe, and followed by his companions who stared into darker corners or glanced fearfully behind when the echoes of their falling feet clumped hollowly through the steel by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Speaker Murray's Speech on Torrens' Land System.

Again, under the abstract system a man desires to borrow some money quickly to save him, perhaps from financial ruin; he goes to the bank, the bank is afraid of the title, the bank has no certain means of knowing especially at the moment—perhaps by reason of not being able to get the loan when he had landed security he meets the financial ruin. Now, the Torrens System is the reverse—it is not a registration of deeds and evidences of title—it is an absolute register of title. First, however, there must be a trial to determine the ownership and then all deeds are cancelled and all except loans or liens upon the land; a certificate is issued to the owner for the decree and after that there is never but one outstanding certificate and that certificate shows every condition of title. Any man as soon as he sees the certificate and it is marked "Torrens Land" knows that it is good—it is just as sound and as safe as buying a government bond, in fact the Wall Street Journal last spring said "That the Torrens' Land Certificate is the safest security that could be made by law." I have but recently a letter from the Governor General of Ontario, one of the provinces of Canada, in which he said "Of all the many things which we are proud in this province, we are most proud of our Torrens' Land Law." Now, suppose the holder of a "Torrens' Certificate desired to borrow some money upon a tract of 160 acres of land, say $100.00 and he'd go to Representative Briggs' bank over there and say I desire to borrow $100.00. Mr. Briggs would say, is your land "abstract land or Torrens'?" If he should reply abstract Mr. Briggs would say I would like to submit that to my attorney first; and perhaps at the end of a week he might get an opinion and then refuse the loan, but if he said it's Torrens, he would say let me see the certificate. The moment he looked upon the certificate he knew every condition of the title without a single cent of expense. Now, the only thing he would want to know would be the kind of land or about what the land was worth. If he knew of the land he would be ready then, as he would ever be, to make the loan because he would know the whole power of the state was behind that property to protect the title. Now suppose he would loan the $100 the owner would have that certificate cancelled on the county clerk's records and new one issued to the owner, whom we will suppose to be Representative Rainey here, on the face of that certificate issued to Rainey would be this statement: "G. W. Briggs holds a first lien for the sum of $100.00 on this tract of land." Then if Mr. Rainey should show that certificate to anyone it could be seen easily what the condition of the title is; that is to say, that the title in the land belonged to R. N. Rainey of Ada, and that G. W. Briggs of Ada holds a first lien for $100.00. Now suppose Mr. Rainey at a later date would desire to borrow another $100.00 and he should go to Representative Robert Johnson's bank in the town of Chickasha, Mr. Johnson would ask what kind of land is it, "abstract" or "Torrens'?" Mr. Rainey would answer it is "Torrens." Then he would ask to see the certificate—when Johnson looked at the certificate he would know the condition of the title and the only question that he would want to know is whether or not the land would stand one more hundred dollars. If he knew, from traveling over the land or from his personal knowledge previously gained, it to be valuable land he would be as ready then as he ever would be to loan on that piece of land. Should he make the loan that certificate would be cancelled and a new one issued showing that the land belonged to R. M. Rainey, that the first lien was held by G. W. Briggs for $100.00, and that a second lien was held by Robert H. Johnson for $100.00. Now as Mr. Rainey paid off that lien the same process of cancelling the certificate and the issuance of new ones eliminating the payments until all had been paid and no liens existing—there would not be any mortgages filed, but all liens would show themselves on the face of the certificate. The transfers made would cost the ordinary fee of 50 cents or $1.00, of getting certificates of any matter or copies or ordinary certificates of any matter of record. It is just as simple, and indeed works on the same plan of transferring stock in a corporation on the books of the company, except the land is transferred on the books of the Torrens Land Records by a bonded officer of the state, usually made by the county clerk or register of deeds as we would say. Now opponents of this system when they make an argument against it they begin to recite that it is declared unconstitutional in Illinois and Ohio. Yes, that is true. True because there was some kind of sympathy—in one instance—between the lawyer and the court; in others because the state constitution, but it has been tested before the supreme court of Massachusetts and has gone to the supreme court of the United States in the case of —vs— wherein the supreme court of the United States has said that it complied with the due process of law of the land and that it did not violate the constitution of the United States, if it did not violate the constitution of the state. It was declared unconstitutional in Illinois because there was judicial powers placed upon the clerk, although it is in force, in a defective way in Cook County, Illinois, and yet I hold before me a book from a real estate dealer of Illinois in which there are the names of some 300 business men, bankers, real estate dealers, railroad magnates, capitalists and other citizens of Chicago all stating that they were satisfied with the Torrens Land Certificate under the Illinois plan, even in its defective form. Railroad presidents say in this booklet that they would accept a Torrens' Land Certificate in preference to a warranty deed backed up by bond to guarantee title because it is safer and so you know bonds are supposed to be the safest thing in the business world.

THE DALLAS COMMERCIAL CLUB

Will Arrive in the City Next Tuesday May 12th.

The Dallas Commercial Club will make its eighth annual business excursion, leaving Dallas on the 11th and arriving in Ada over the M. & T. Tuesday, May 12th at 1:15 p. m. and leaving over the Frisco at 2:35 p. m. remaining in our city one hour and twenty minutes. This is the longest stop they make at any town in this part of the state, and let every citizen turn out and give them a rousing welcome. There will be seventy-five gentlemen in the party representing the leading wholesale houses, of Dallas.

An effort should be made to get before these people the natural resources and the production of the different manufacturing enterprises of the city, for instance samples from the cement plant, the brick plant, etc., and plenty of good cold artesian water.

The streets should be as clean as possible for nothing catches the eye of the stranger so much as a nice clean city.

Lets be up and doing and when they get back to Dallas let them feel that they met an up to date set of business men in a hustling little city.

The attention of the 25,000 Club is especially called to the visit of the Dallas Commercial Club next Tuesday.

The Tobin Palatial Home.

Among the many modern and up to date cottages being constructed in the city of Ada, none to which our attention has been attracted, compares in elegance and finish as the new home of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Tobin, now nearing completion on 17th street. This structure was planned and constructed by Mr. J. B. Giles, a resident of Ada and we could not do justice to this piece of architecture without giving Mr. Giles credit that is due him.

The library hall and dining room is finished in imported hard woods of several kinds, while the stairway, interior columns, doors, windows, mantels, etc., are of white oak. The floors being of neat designs of parquet, composed of the various kinds of costly oak with traces of holly, maple, walnut, cherry and South American mahogany. The building has eight rooms with pantry, subboards, closets, including linen closets, porches with colonial columns, all finished in elaborate style. The building also has a basement. The painting and decorating is being done by the Ingram Paint Co., who deserve their share of the credit in this elegant building. Mr. Ingram looking personally after this part of the work. It is gratifying indeed to know that we have among us such citizens, who are willing to add to the beauty of the city such homes. It is an indication that they will remain permanently, and deserve the credit and appreciation of the city for the display of energy, money, ingenuity and merchantish that this home has afforded.

Notice.

If you need pasture for your stock, see J. R. Ingram. Plenty of grass and water. One mile south of Ada.

Clean Up.

City Marshal Geo. Culver requests us to state that he proposes from now on to enforce the law regarding the cleaning of alleys and sweeping rubbish, papers and other stuff into the street. This does not only apply to alleys, but back yards of all business and residence houses. Get barrels or boxes and put your rubbish into it. Phone the city scavenger and have him haul it off. This can be done with very little expense and will help keep the city cleaner. Mr. Culver says there will be no exception to this rule.

Good Water.

Rev. J. R. Brown came in the News office today and informed us that he and his family began using the artesian water about one week ago and each member of his family have gained one-half pound per day since they began using it.

Home Mission Society.

The Home Mission Society was organized 22 years ago by Miss Lucinda B. Helm. Its primary work was to build parsonages, especially in the great west, and the work is not yet near complete.

The Home Mission Society has grown and broadened until now its work is a three-fold ministry, namely to relieve, to teach and to save.

When we consider the poor. The Orientals, the Mormon danger, the Roman Catholic influence, the orphans and the fallen, we find that every woman in Southern Methodism is needed to do this work.

Any one who has second hand clothing which they would like to donate as charity, The Home Mission society of Ada will receive, care for and distribute advisedly.

cavern. Once a weird shriek caused them to spring toward each other with nervous fright, and when the ship's cat came mewing up to them, begging in its animal way for companionship, they looked foolishly at one another like boys who had been startled in the midst of ghost tales told by a campfire in the woods.

Cabin after cabin and wardroom after wardroom was opened and searched; but nowhere could be found sign of disturbance or conflict. There was not another living being aboard to greet them, nor did they find more awful testimonials of war.

In the captain's quarters, clean and business-like, the roll-topped desk was closed, and the books on top of it were in order as for inspection. At its side stood a typewriter with the tin resting lightly upon it, and a stenographer's case notebook beside neatly checked and showing that the last letter or order had been completed. On the wardroom table lay a magazine open and turned page downward as though the reader had desired to keep his place and had stepped away from it on a sudden call. In the galleys of this great floating home pots, pans and kettles were placed in orderly array in their racks—no thrifty housewife could have left her kitchen in better state. In the chartroom the traced highways of the ocean's bed were drawn up in their closed cases, and the hoists were not loaded or littered with ammunition as would have been the case had the battle ship been in action when overcome by the enemy. There was nothing above or below offering a key to the enigma.

Puzzled and overcome, the patrolmen took temporary charge of the ship, while a boat hurried away from the miniature flotilla, carrying a detailed report to the admiralty, where the news was received with amazement no less than that which had brought the crowd on the embankment. Subordinates of departments called for their tardy superiors, telephone bells jangled, and British phlegm gave way to excitement; but even in this remarkable state precedent was maintained and routine observed, so that from man to man, going constantly upward, the report reached the first lord of the admiralty.

Then for the first time it was learned that this high and mighty official was missing from his home and had been summoned to the palace in the night. No delay could be brooked in an event so startling, and with due ceremony inquiries were instituted for him. This caused an investigation in gray old Buckingham, which spread until it came to the head of government, when it became known that not only was the naval officer missing, but no less a personage than the king of England as well.

In great disasters by sea or land where swift Death ravages, men cry aloud in their excitement and distress; but when a calamity threatens a nation and a king is involved, they seek to hide their emotions. Hence it was that in the palace men came hurriedly together without words to those around, and in whispers expressed their anxiety. It was recalled with alarm that the king had left his palace in an equally unceremonious manner, decoyed by a stranger, and enticed into the night. Nor was his fate as uncertain or with more ground for question, because there he had been traced to a carriage which had driven away. The king of England had gone into his garden, and the guards at the gates swore he had not passed the portals, which they watched. And for their pains they were doubted and placed under temporary detention until the king should return to prove that they were not in a conspiracy against the state.

Perhaps the alarm would have been less keen were it not for the tale of the kaiser; but the cases were so parallel that the conclusion was instantly formed that England's monarch was probably in as great jeopardy as his fellow ruler who had now been gone for many days. The nobles looked at one another askance, and asked what times were these when no person might be so august as to be immune from seizure. Where was the limit to be reached? What could be expected next? Was there no possible protection even for the heads of government and society?

In the offices of the admiralty those of more or less prominence in the department held a conference and detailed men to take charge of the Dreadnought. There could be no attempt to rehabilitate her at that time, inasmuch as it would be impossible ever again to bring her into service without destroying a span of the bridge below; therefore no corner's lacquer could have covered with more solemnity than did those men who took charge of and boarded this great dead thing of the sea.

A derelict cast upon an open sandy beach offered more chance of salvage than the greatest vessel of the greatest navy of the world, nosed in the mud and practically walled in. And while she lay in this state of helplessness there was forming round English shores a formidable flotilla of other war vessels flying the British flag, which had been summoned from all waters of the globe to protect the mother country from German invasion or if need arose gallantly to seek death beds in the sea in the attempt to fend off the American terror should it be directed against the island ruler of the waves.

As they advanced, captains of this great navy arrived in London in response to urgent summons and hastened to the admiralty. One and all they were asked to pass expert opinion on the condition of the Dreadnought, and offer a solution of the methods used to bring her to that singular anchorage in the river; but, like children groping in the mist, they could formulate no tenable theory nor give any lucid explanation. They looked at each other in amazement, wagged their heads and admitted their inability. Plague would have left dead men at their posts, or battle would have left more serious scars than the cutting away of the fighting masts and wrecking of the stacks; but even then who would navigate her to home waters, and what could account for her presence in a place where even a small sea-going craft could not go? If that nation in the west had a submarine of terrific speed and unknown power it might perhaps destroy a ship; but by what means could it force it under or over a bridge of solid masonry and steel?

And so the men of the sea passed down and back, while the people of London spent the time in trying to see the latest evidence of disaster, took turns in crowding to the embankment, and then went to their homes. Business came to a halt, shops were unopened and desks were closed. In the government offices men moved helplessly, and in homes throughout the country families sat within doors gravely discussing the latest manifestation of power.

Nor was the public aware that in higher circles another cause for anxiety had been uncovered, which was nothing less than the disappearance of the prime minister. A king, a prime minister and the first lord of the admiralty taken at one time! It was sufficient to make others of prominence look at one another questioning when their turn might come and what the end would be. No one was safe in this great crisis, when thrones tottered on their settings and men were whisked away in the night, when the most powerful vessels of war created by all the wisdom of science and ingenuity of invention might be dominated and handled like toys.

There was no ground for belief that any power other than the United States might have been the controlling spirit in this long series of untoward events, but from that nation came no word, only a silence more menacing than the thunder of distant guns, and more terrible and ominous than an open display of invincible arms. It took no great stretch of imagination to people the air with phalanx on phalanx of stern and implacable foemen bent on invasion when the time seemed ripe. A country which could flaunt the world was capable of anything, and it was not believable that she was acting without a purpose. But what means did she take? What would be her next move? How had she accomplished those victories already scored upon her tally sheet? Only one hope for partial explanation remained, and that was based upon the return to sanity of a maddened sailor who had come to them on a life raft from the unknown, as the only witness of a disaster, and the only living link.

And even while the anxious officials thought of him a group of surgeons and specialists were standing round a cot in a hospital watching this man breathe his last. Now that his importance had increased a hundredfold Death was intervening and sealing his lips. He passed away as silently as he had been found, his jumbled wits giving no new and tangible clew. Speechless he had been picked up on a life raft in mid ocean, and speechless he voyaged out into another world.

Night fell over London, infolding a stricken city where none came upon the streets and men within doors whispered to each other, dreading what the morrow might bring forth. The heart of Britain, beating with dogged determination to the last, was broken. America was the master of fate, and could deal out its awards or blows with the inexorableness of a god.

CHAPTER XIII.
In the Beginning.
It was January of that momentous year when the world's unrest reached a climax, and the president of the United States, his official day done, sat alone in his study, perusing a report from an agent of the state department and mentally comparing it with preceding ones. The shaded light threw into relief against the darker shadows behind the long, lean jaw, the grimly determined mouth and the somber eyes, but lent a touch of softness to the queer little lines which told that on occasion the man could show infinite kindness and humanity.

Thrust forward from the ranks of the people into the most important office of the land, driven reluctantly into the arena of action from a seclusion which had for him the charms of peace, he was still a man in peculiar isolation. In this, the third year of his term, he was yet unknown and under constant discussion. Half of his countrymen hailed him as the Lincoln of his time, and the other half declared him a tyrant in embryo. He had fought so doggedly for his principles that he had estranged those who had been his most ardent supporters. His disregard for party projects had cost him the friendship of politicians; his advocacy of certain reforms had subjected him to caustic comments; his very dignity and sensitiveness had been mistaken for austerity; and only his most intimate friends understood that in him beat a great heart filled to overflowing for his country and fellow men. These comprehending friends were few; but among them, perhaps the most intimate, was the friend of his boyhood, "Old Bull" Roberts, the inventor.

Between these two there existed that singular affection found rarely among master minds where each admires qualities in the other which he himself lacks. To Roberts the president was the greatest statesman of the century, and to the president Roberts was the most accomplished scientist and inventor who had ever lived; but on this night, laden with fate in which each was to play his part, the mind of neither was on the other. The inventor was absorbed in the last of a series of experiments that had enmeshed him in a dream whereby he hoped to eradicate friction, and the president was perturbed by reports for which he had waited many weeks.

These latter were exhaustive in detail, and in recapitulation tersely predicted that it would be almost an impossibility to avert war with Japan as soon as she reached a state of preparation. They summed up her naval strength, which they declared almost equal at the time of writing to that of the United States, and told how every navy yard in Japan was rushing construction with all available speed both night and day, so that her augmented squadrons when built would be superior to those of the great republic. They reviewed the land preparations by showing that a greater number of men were being drilled than ever before in the country's history, and that the redoubtable army sent against Russia would be small in comparison with that which could be mobilized for another invasion. The reports expressed the belief that Japanese capitalists were anxious to seize the Philippines, and were encouraging the ambitions of the emperor of Nippon to the full extent of their purses, hoping ultimately to find another outlet for investment under their own flag. As if in proof that the government was supporting this bellicose attitude, the reports gave as a certainty that some high authority was dictating the editorial policies of the Japanese press, and in all ways possible fomenting the ill feeling against the United States.

There could be no underestimation of the ability of the naval officer who had made these statements; for he had passed more than ten years in that station of the orient, spoke the language thoroughly well, understood the people, and above all was no alarmist. He gave it as his final opinion that within six months, Japan, her navy completed, her soldiers drilled to perfection, and her treasury well supplied with gold, would find pretext for a declaration of war. The only means of preventing this deplorable event, in his judgment, was to place the American navy in such a state of pronounced superiority that it would stay the warlike Japanese and hold them in the leash of awe.

The president read the last clause again, and with a sigh of discontent leaned back in his chair. Hour after hour he brooded over the complexities of the situation, and late at night came to the conclusion that he must lose no time in calling together his most trusted advisers, lay the report before them, and then by consultation and discussion decide which would be the most promising policy to pursue in so grave a crisis. Before he retired the orders were given to his secretary which resulted in the first meeting of that coterie of men who were to assume the full responsibility for the conduct of war which afterwards fulfilled the expert's prediction.
